Theatre Comique. The Theatre Comique was reopened last night by Colonel Sneibaker, and long before the hour for the curtain to rise the auditorium was by Colonel Sneibater, and long before the hour for the curtain to rise the auditorium was packed with a dense mass of humanity. In the private boxes were representatives of the State, Post-Office, and Treasury Departments, as well as a goodly number of the local press. The gallery was occupied by Young Americas, both white and black, who made themselves heard whenever it suited them. Colonel Sneibaker has greatly improved the Cominge, and the bright colors of the repainting made it quite attractive, giving it a decidedly cleanly appearance. Much of the scenery was also new. When the curtain rose there was a loud burst of applause, and as the programme progressed the encores were abundant. Murray and Murphy, the eccentric irish comedians, were the first who "caught on," and the "boys seemed loth to let them go. Then came the Bordeaux Sisters, two lovely girls whose sweet vices and graceful daneing completely captured the entire house. The Four Aces—Sherman, Wayne, Tierney, and Owens—in their wonderful, probatic and grotesque dancing were most amusing, and after tumbling and knocking themselves about until it didn't seem there was anything left of them, they were followed by the Olympia Quariette, consisting of Mesars, Keough, Stillivan, Randahl, and Mack, who so delighted the audience by their Jubilee songs that they were recalled seven times. Crumby and be Forrest, in their songs and dances, and the Nauch before in a variety performance.

Driver's Summer Garden.

Driver's Summer Garden Theater was thrown open to the public last evening, estensibly for a public rehearsal only, but in reality the performance was one of the finest ever offered to the Washington public. The garden was crowded with an enthusiastic an audience as ever assemwith as enthusastic an audience as ever assembled at any place of anusement in this city, and the programme was greeted with round after round of applause. A large number of ladies were seated upon the balconies. The programme was lengthy and excellent. The oriel juggling of Mons. Bushnell, introducing trained bigeous was remarkable. Mr. Fernando Fleury's musical specialties were exquisite. The most taking gens of the evening were the baritone solos of Mr. H. E. Danforth. This gentleman has a voice of remarkable flexibility, and he should embrace opera. Captain Charles Beach gave an exhibition of his wonderful skill under water, but the gentlemen who were in the orchestra chairs were giving an exhibition of what they could do with dener liquid, so we will only say that Captain Beach was perfection. Miss Kittle Thomas, Miss Louise Casileton, Miss Lara Gorden, Miss Ada La Selle, the Marine Band and Mr. William Jaeger (on the cornet), assisted to make the evening an unusually pleasant one. All these celebrities will appear during the week.

The World's Museum of Wonders The World's Museum was well filled at both pe formances yesterday, by a number of persons who were anxious to see the colored child who is so were anxious to see the colored child who is so enormously large. The child is very smart, five years old, and weighs 150 pounds. The other curiostics still continue to attend attention, and taking it all in all the World's Musoum is one of the best exhibitions that ever came to Washington. The afternion performance begins at two o'clock, night exhibitions at eight, and the low price of admission—fifteen cents—places the collection of wonders within everybody's reach.

Chamber Music.

The last of the series of the chamber music con The last of the series of the chamber music concerts, which have been so enjoyable during the past season, will be given next Thursday night at Marini's Hall. The programme will consist of a string quintette by Rhinoberger, a quariette by Beethoven, and a plane quintette by Saint Saens. This will undoubtedly be the best programme of the season.
